

The Road to Constructive Communication

What skills would greatly benefit you in expressing your desires in the education of your child? Constructive communication skills are the best way to effectively communicate concerns in your child's IEP or other school meetings. Come learn 8 skills you can develop to aid you on the road to greater success in your child's education. Constructive communication is key in advocating for the services and accommodations your child requires to help get them to their desired destination.

Come join us for a fun and interactive parent workshop!
